REFILLLOOP

30-Day Multi-Channel Campaign Execution Roadmap

Instagram • LinkedIn • YouTube

A fictional proposed modular reusable-hydration campaign. All product features, audiences, budgets, KPI values, and outcomes are planning assumptions or targets—not live-market facts, customer results, or a published campaign.

Campaign premise and positioning

Fictional proposed campaign; no product launch, performance, customer, or environmental claim.

A proposed routine-design system for people whose hydration needs shift across commute, desk, training, and travel—not a claim of market leadership.

Proposed differentiation

Route	Planning use
Modular routine framing	A campaign design choice to test; not a verified market advantage.
Cross-channel habit education	A campaign design choice to test; not a verified market advantage.
Workplace activation toolkit	A campaign design choice to test; not a verified market advantage.
Feedback-led concept validation	A campaign design choice to test; not a verified market advantage.

30-day narrative

Days 1–7 frame everyday refill friction; Days 8–12 reveal the concept; Days 13–18 educate around proposed routines; Days 19–22 run planned message tests; Days 23–30 invite early-access interest and capture learning for a future authorized launch.

Product and pricing assumptions

• RefillLoop is a proposed modular reusable hydration system with replaceable carry components.

• A proposed companion experience supplies optional routine prompts; no health, scientific, or impact benefit is claimed.

• Illustrative early-access price hypothesis: USD 44–64; validate willingness to pay before a real launch.

Audience, objectives, and channel roles

Personas are planning devices, not research-derived customer profiles.

Persona	Motivation / pain point	Targeting assumption
Maya — hybrid commuter	Reduce carry friction across changing locations Forgets or abandons routines when plans change	Interest/context test: commuting, hybrid work, productivity; exclude unsupported demographic inference.
Sam — active routine builder	Keep a repeatable work-to-training routine Needs simple cues and portable organization	Interest/context test: training routines, wellbeing content, reusable products; test creative, do not assume conversion.
Aisha — workplace wellbeing lead	Offer low-friction routine prompts for hybrid teams Needs practical, measurable internal activations	LinkedIn job-function/context test: people operations, workplace experience, facilities; use platform policy-compliant targeting only.

SMART objectives

Objective	Target / assumption	Measurement
Build qualified concept awareness	Over 30 days, deliver 120,000 proposed paid-and-organic impressions while recording platform-native reach separately. Baseline: No prior audience or account baseline is available.	Platform reach exports and UTM-tagged landing-page sessions.
Validate message routes	Run at least four planned A/B creative or CTA comparisons and retain a decision log by Day 30. Baseline: No prior creative winner is assumed.	Predefined primary KPI per test; do not call a winner without adequate delivery and context.
Generate early-access intent	Model 300 proposed qualified interest-form completions, with the actual result reported only after a live, consented launch. Baseline: Illustrative 1.5% landing-page completion rate; not a forecast.	Consent-aware form-completion event and source UTM.

Channel roles

Instagram delivers routine prompts, visual saves, polls, and community response. LinkedIn delivers professional storytelling, workplace use cases, and toolkit content. YouTube uses Shorts for discovery and long-form video for concept demonstration and implementation detail.

Paid media, measurement, testing, and safeguards

Platform	Proposed media allocation	Role
Instagram	USD 1,350	Amplify the platform role; no spend incurred.
LinkedIn	USD 1,050	Amplify the platform role; no spend incurred.
YouTube	USD 600	Amplify the platform role; no spend incurred.
Total	USD 3,000	Illustrative media-only planning budget; no spend is authorized or incurred.

Dashboard specification

Track platform-native reach and video attention separately; tag campaign links with source, medium, campaign, content, and test variant; record consent-aware interest-form completions; and maintain a qualitative feedback-theme log. No metric becomes a business result until a real authorized campaign runs.

A/B testing and optimization rules

Planned comparisons: utility-first versus lifestyle-first creative; ‘join interest list’ versus ‘explore the concept’ CTA; commuter versus desk-day hook; and LinkedIn document versus text post. Log hypothesis, audience, creative, primary KPI, delivery context, result, and next action. Do not declare a winner from one post; shift budget only in small documented increments after the pre-agreed delivery condition is met.

Risk register

Risk	Control / contingency owner
Fictional concept mistaken for a live product	Use a clear proposed-concept disclaimer; social lead pauses or corrects creative.
Unsupported environmental, material, or health claim	Legal/claim review before release; substitute factual concept language.
Comment or consent issue	Community lead uses an approved response and escalation path.
Production or platform-delivery delay	Keep a tested static fallback and reschedule with a logged reason.

Copy, implementation, and references

Copy variations

• Utility: ‘Your day changes. Your refill routine can have a plan.’ — Explore the concept.

• Routine: ‘One small cue can make the next refill easier to remember.’ — Try a habit stack.

• Professional: ‘Workplace wellbeing ideas need an owner, a cue, and a way to learn.’ — Save the activation template.

• Feedback: ‘What would make a reusable routine easier to repeat?’ — Share one barrier.

Implementation readiness checklist

Before any real campaign: validate product claims and availability; confirm privacy/consent flow; approve creative and accessibility captions; create landing page and UTM taxonomy; configure permitted platform targeting; assign community response coverage; validate conversion events; and obtain separate authorization for publication or paid spend.
